Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Brain, Vol. 40: A Journal of Neurology At that stage certain conclusions were drawn, viz., that general paralysis and tabes dorsalis were lymphogenous infections; and that the non-systemic degenerative lesions found in cancer cachexia, pernicious anaemia, and Addison s disease, came under the heading of haematogenous infections. In the above experiments the results of toxic action were studied in the spinal cord only; in the present series the research has been directed towards the brain, and the capsule containing a culture of the Staphylococcus aureus was placed in contact with the common carotid artery in the neck. The experiments, though limited in number, have given positive results so far, and are worthy of record, as they help to explain the pathogenesis of certain obscure lesions of the central nervous system found in man. Hyaline thrombosis was found to be a constant result in the cords examined when the capsules were placed in the abdominal cavity, and we find the same morbid change in the vessels of the brain when the capsule is placed against the carotid sheath. The lesions to be described are the direct result of this thrombotic change, and vary in kind with the degree to which the local vascular supply is interfered with. Rabbits were used for experiment. We have examined three brains so far and have observed two types of lesion. (1) Coagulation necrosis of the nerve cells in the cornu ammonis, in the cerebral cortex, and in the amygdaloid nucleus. (2) Softening in the stratum moleculare of the cornu ammonis. Before entering upon a description of the lesions in the cornu ammonis, let us look for a moment at the...
